

No Appeal. No Warning. No Bull Politics Suspended from X

30 October 2025

UPDATE 31 Oct 2025: My account has been restored, but with no communication from X as to why my account was suspended in the first place and no apology.

Statement Regarding My Suspension from X (formerly Twitter)

On 22 October 2025, my account on X was unexpectedly suspended. The automated notice claimed that my appeal was likely final — despite the fact that I was never offered the chance to submit an appeal. Effectively, this has been a “one strike and you’re out” situation with no right to reply.

I have now contacted X in both the United States and the United Kingdom to make three simple requests:

- The specific rule X believes I violated
- Why no appeal process was offered
- How this aligns with X’s stated commitment to free expression

I have also reached out to the Free Speech Union for advice and support.

My posts speak for themselves: they are based on fact, logic, and legitimate democratic debate. If political speech grounded in truth and public interest is now grounds for suspension, that is a serious matter far beyond my account alone.

Until I receive a clear explanation, I will continue pursuing answers through all appropriate channels. I will update readers here as soon as responses arrive from X US, X UK, or the Free Speech Union.

— Rob

No Bull Politics